

Homes, Food, and Tools Review

Week 19 • Friday • Show What You Know!

Remember When...

What a week of clever ideas! You explored Native American homes: fast-moving tipis on the plains, longhouses full of families in the woodlands, and cool adobe pueblos in the desert — some still lived in after 1,000 years!

You met the Three Sisters — corn, beans, and squash growing together as a team. You wove like a basket maker and learned about canoes, snowshoes, moccasins, and the travois.

Best of all, you discovered that popcorn, potatoes, chocolate, and tomatoes were Native American first foods that still fill your kitchen today. Now show what you know!

Big Review Questions

1. Describe one Native American home and why it fit its place perfectly.

2. How did the Three Sisters help each other grow?

Fill in the Blanks

tipi pueblo sisters snowshoes canoe popcorn

1. A _____ could be packed up fast to follow the buffalo.
2. A _____ is an adobe home that stays cool in the desert.
3. Corn, beans, and squash are the Three _____.
4. _____ let people walk on top of deep snow.
5. A birch bark _____ was light enough to carry.
6. Native farmers even invented _____!

True or False

Write T for true or F for false in each circle.

- ☐ Longhouses were homes for many related families.
- ☐ Pueblos were made from buffalo hide.
- ☐ The Three Sisters were planted together in one mound.
- ☐ Baskets could be woven tight enough to hold water.
- ☐ Nobody uses canoes or snowshoes anymore.
- ☐ Potatoes and chocolate were Native first foods.

Home, Food, or Tool?

Write H (home), F (food), or T (tool) for each item.

Item	H, F, or T?
Longhouse
Snowshoes
Squash
Travois
Pueblo
Wild rice

My Favorite Invention

Draw the Native American home, food, or tool you thought was the cleverest — and add a sentence about why.

Week Summary

This week you learned:

- Tipis, longhouses, and pueblos each fit their land perfectly
- The Three Sisters grew as a team: corn, beans, and squash
- Canoes, snowshoes, baskets, and moccasins are still used today
- Many foods on your table were Native American first foods

Next week: Storytime! We'll discover Native American stories, legends, music, and traditions passed down for generations.

Final Review

I can...	Circle one
Describe three kinds of Native homes	YES / NOT YET
Explain the Three Sisters garden	YES / NOT YET
Name Native inventions still used today	YES / NOT YET